

A Kentucky paper says: "We pay nothing for the air we breathe, but we are taking it for granted. The birds of the air and the beasts of the field, wild and domesticated, have the advantage over man." We never knew until we read the above that the Kentuckians valued their beverage. We have always labored under the hallucination that they took their whisky "straight."

The President's removal this morning was more encouraging than when the evening bulletin was issued yesterday. The excitement of the removal had the tendency to create an unhealthy high fever, and a correspondingly rapid pulse, but these declined during the night, and this morning the old state of affairs seems to be existing again. It does not appear that the removal to Long Branch has had any bad effects, and it is too soon for any favorable results to show themselves. It may be a day or two yet before the consequences of the removal begin to make themselves manifest.

The Millennium at Hand

In the view of Edward Atkinson the millennium must be near at hand. He pictures as follows the prospective subordination of electricity to the varied uses of man.

"If we can send light over a wire, if we can attach to the same posts another wire by which to transmit power by electricity, so that each farmer may perhaps get a power on top in his barn to cut his own fodder, churn his butter, and do all the heavy work, if we are able to accomplish here what is now being actually done in France, that is, operate an electrical machine by a small water power on the farm, and run the plows by the power developed by electricity, if these things begin to be apparent, that are so bewildering that one even gets mixed up in attempting to describe them, and is not quite sure what relation his parts of speech bear to each other—why then perhaps the millennium of the economist is nearer at hand than it has been supposed to be—the time when intelligence and integrity and a very moderate amount of labor will insure so good a subsistence that it will not pay to be rich."

Some one has discovered that the English alphabet was the invention of a prehistoric Ohio man. A Major Beebe has found in the mounds near Piqua, pieces of slate which bear upon their surface hieroglyphics similar to the English alphabet. The most significant detail of this identification is that the forms of the letters are almost precisely those that occur about the Mediterranean, and whose phonetic values have been exactly determined by Alois Hoes in his standard work on the classification of old Spanish coins. But should this identification be correct, the point arises where this alphabet originated—whether in this country or in the old. Major Beebe claims to have traced each form of letter to aboriginal American picture symbols, in which the same significance obtains in both Europe and American forms. It has always been a matter of theory that Ohio was the promised land that Moses and the children of Israel were hunting for so long, and that they struck Canaan by mistake.

Or the older Mrs. Garfield one of these about her writes to the Cleveland Leader: "The dear old lady, who has been despairing, is happy again. She has just said: 'You see I have got my work. I always put it away when James is worn.' There was no violent outburst of grief when we told her the worst. She sat perfectly quiet, folded and unfolded her handkerchief many times in a mechanical way, then she arose and walked feebly from room to room, nothing cooing her lips, but the short prayer: 'May the Lord help me to be resigned.' Sunday afternoon, when a favorable dispatch was read, she expressed the first contentment that told her condition for her son. She said: 'I hope James may live to finish his administration.'"

This was what General Grant wrote to the Ashbury Park reception committee: "It would at all times afford me pleasure to meet the members of your association and the residents of Ocean Grove and Ashbury Park, but at this time, when the country is in despair over the prostrate body of the Chief Magistrate, whose life seems to hang by a single thread, I am not willing to accept the compliment implied by the announcement which I have read in the papers."

Some poet has said that "All torments of the damned we find in only those, Oh Jealousy, thy tyrant of the mind." This is grandly sweeping and magnificently inaccurate. Any sufferer from Indigestion knows to the contrary. Indigestion, he villian of the tragedy played among the gastric jokers of the stomach case, and does not discount the horrors of jealousy. Jealousy is often an accident upon the latter, and when Indigestion is removed this jealous companion of a damaged liver flies. TARIKINE is the best known remedy for Indigestion, and the best of all. NOTES FROM THE SOLDIERS RE-UNION AT KENNEY, ILL.

KENNEY, Ill., Sept. 3, 1891.
Editor: REPUBLICAN: Last Thursday morning by various modes of travel we reached Kenney on our way to the reunion at Kenney, only to find that a wreck on the Midland would detain us for an indefinite length of time. No other mode of conveyance being at hand, we were compelled to wait from 10 a. m. until 7 p. m., when the Midland accommodation arrived which we boarded for Kenney. I speak by the card and advisedly when I say accommodation, for they jolt a fellow till he is hungry and make two stops between Kenney and Kenney for passengers to change resting ears to keep them from starving. Arriving at our destination, we found the town full of people, and a successful ball in full blast. With eight comrades we took a bunk for camp nearly a mile from the town, which place we reached about 10 o'clock at night. Here we found the Kenney soldiers in camp, also a number of old veterans. After some inquiry I found a tent filled with old comrades of the 41st, where I met with a warm welcome.

The camp is pitched on the north bank of Salt creek. The camp consists of fifty wall tents from the St. Louis arsenal, and with a camp experience of nearly five years it has seldom been my lot to tent on a more beautiful or picturesque camp-ground. Open, grass covered, dotted with giant sugar trees, elms and sycamores, with clean white tents scattered among them, the rattle of the drum, the clear notes of the bugle, the camp fires burning here and there, all made up the perfect home of the soldier.

Friday morning was cloudy with indications of rain. All the 41st boys walked to town for breakfast to save paying the camp shanty the small sum of 20 cents for a square meal, which consisted of a small, water logged pot with its open punched out and the sockets filled with Salt-creek sand. Soon after the crowd commenced to gather the rain began falling, sending people to the tents till they were full; while a great many went back to town in the rain. About 10 o'clock the clouds broke away, and people began pouring into camp from all directions. A fair estimate placed the number at 3,000. With a number of old comrades from a distance we partook of a splendid dinner with members of the regiment living in the vicinity who came with their families and a well-supplied commissary. After dinner the exercises of the day commenced at a handsomely decorated stand on the north side of the camp. The first thing in order was a welcome address, after which Mrs. M. L. Cain, of Decatur, read "Sheridan's Ride." Music by the Marine band followed, and then came "The Star Spangled Banner," recited by Miss Ella Tupper. This was followed by Colonel Lynch, of Lincoln, with a speech to the volunteers. Music followed again, and short speeches from others present; the one that drew the heartiest applause being by John Spencer, a private in the 41st. John had been there, and he knew what to talk about. After the close of the exercises proper everybody enjoyed themselves in their own way.

One of the most touching incidents of the day to the few present was the visit of Miss Tupper to the headquarters of the 41st regiment, and shaking hands with the members present. But few words were spoken, but the tear-dimmed eyes of every veteran told in language more eloquent than words of their respect for their dead commander and the accomplished young lady in their presence who was only a child when her father fell in battle nineteen years ago on the historic and well-fought field of Shiloh.

Another incident was the presence of old Jim, the horse that Col. McClellan rode through the war while in command of the 33d Illinois volunteers. Adj. Weaver, of the 41st, bought him at the close of the war, and has owned him ever since. The horse is in good trim, and looks as if he could again march from Ottawa, Ill., to the sea. If this should meet the eye of an Ottawa editor, he can tell the 33d boys that McClellan's war horse is still living, well cared for, that he will be decently buried when he dies, and that John Short, of Monticello, will place a tombstone over his grave to perpetuate the memory of old Jim.

A card was read from a comrade living at Sioux City, Iowa, stating that the 3d Iowa volunteers would hold a reunion at Des Moines this fall. The 3d was the army regiment of the 41st, and no more gallant band of men ever bore their country's banner to victory on the battlefield than our well remembered comrades of the 3d Iowa volunteers.

If the crowd makes anything a success, then the reunion on Friday was successful. But the old soldiers did not go for the big crowd; they went to meet each other as comrades and brothers, to renew old friendships, to talk of scenes and incidents of the weary marches, and around the camp-fires of battles fought and victories won, of comrades who went down in the fight, and who have long since succumbed to dust, but whose memories shall be revered and held sacred while a single life, or the republic stands.

The organizations are in the unknown beyond, while here are a few scattered pikets gallantly struggling in the battle of life, waiting the drum-beat that calls them to face the approach of the silent enemy that knows no defeat, and again join the ranks with the gallant and fiery Tupper, the chivalrous Long, of the brave True, of Tuttle and Spencer, Cox, Dubois, Houston and Jordan, and the host of gallant spirits that answered their last roll-call amidst the thrilling cannon and sharp rattle of musketry. Brave men, the pikets, comrades that fought your heroic deeds under the drum-beat of the roll to join your gallant body on the Ever-green Shores.

Now shall your glory be forgot.
White flags her record keep.
Or honor points the hallowed spot
Where Valor proudly sleeps.
The members of the 41st before parting resolved to hold a regimental reunion in Decatur a year from this coming October, the day to be settled upon sometime in the future.
Miss Tupper requested the photos of the members of the regiment. John Hazel, of LaSalle county, will procure in Chicago an album holding 200 photos, and Capt. Theo. Weaver, of Kenney, will gather the pictures and send them with the album to Miss Tupper.
The veterans present could not say enough in praise of the hospitable manner in which they were treated in Decatur last fall.

Views of a Statesman.

The following is a letter recently written by Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, in response to an invitation by the Republicans of Massachusetts to address their approaching state convention. Owing to illness he had to decline; but his letter embodies the following statesmanlike views and it can not fail to throw helpful light upon the deliberations of the convention.

The contest for the presidential supremacy of one principle is one that in the nature of things rarely ends, for in some form or other the safety of equal rights—equal in benefit and equal in burden—is always menaced. Some of the immediate measures of these final objects of good government, I think, ought to be: To preserve and improve the laws for the security of national civil rights; to make as effective as possible provisions for the purity and fairness of congressional elections; to establish by law the methods of ascertaining the result of presidential elections, so as to give the conclusive effect the constitution demands to the action of each state, and to prevent the exercise by the houses of congress of any of the nature of appellate or review power over the action of the constituted authority of the state in such cases; to improve the civil service as to diminish, and if possible remove, the evils of place hunting and the intermingling of favors between the members of the legislative and executive branches of the government, and to free the tenure of a great number of officers from dependence upon political favor or political opinion; to readjust the revenue laws upon the basis of producing the greatest revenue with the least and nearest equal burden to the people, and developing and encouraging the industrial pursuits of every calling of our citizens; to bring both the theory and practice of the government in regard to the currency to the point of a fixed and uniform standard of value, and making coin only a legal tender in the payment of the debts; and to promote, so far as the national government can lawfully do so, the increase and diffusion of education among all the citizens and in every part of the republic.

PERRY, N. Y., Sunday, Sept. 4.—Mrs. Allison, wife of Senator W. B. Allison, of Iowa, walked from Castle yesterday, where she had been stopping at a water cure, to Silver Lake, a distance of four miles, and deliberately walked into the water with her clothes on and carrying two suitcases. When rescued by a fisherman she said: "I tried to drown myself." The lady is supposed to be partially insane. Afterward she said: "I tried to drown myself and not cause my husband any more trouble." "She lost one value in her walk through the water, and the other was found to day by diving for it. Mrs. Allison is a fine looking lady, and her strange conduct has caused much surprise.

Grand Discoveries.
The discovery of a great remedy is frequently a matter of accident. This, however, is not the case with TARIKINE, now widely known and approved as an almost infallible remedy for Liver Complaint and diseases of the Kidneys and Bile. The best physicians have for many years used various preparations of dandelion root in these diseases but with only indifferent success. After a long series of experiments, a combination, with the active principle of the Dandelion root, and other improved remedies to lighten its potency has been effected, and the desired specific for these diseases has been found in the product—TARIKINE.

TELEGRAPHIC AT LONG BRANCH.

The President in a Better Condition This Morning.

Details of the Removal.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 7, 9.20 a. m.
The following official bulletin was issued this morning, Sept. 7, 9 a. m.: The President left the greater part of the night, awaking, however, as often as it was necessary to give nourishment, which he took very well. The fever reported in last evening's bulletin had subsided by 11 p. m. This morning his temperature is normal, and he appears to have quite recovered from the fatigues of yesterday's journey. At the morning dressing the parietal abscess was found to be doing well; the visible part of the wound looked somewhat better. Pulse 106, temperature 98.4, respiration 18. The next bulletin will be issued at 6 o'clock this evening.

BLISS,
WOODWARD,
HAMILTON,
BARNES, REYNOLDS,
AGNEW.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—President Garfield was removed from the mansion this morning to the special train at the depot which was to convey him to Long Branch. His removal was successfully accomplished, without any mishap or noteworthy incident. The entire route was kept clear of vehicles by policemen stationed at every interesting street. A number of people remained up all night outside the gates in front of the mansion, and by the time the conveyance containing the president passed through the gates, about 150 persons had assembled to witness the departure and obtain a glimpse of the patient. When the presidential party reached the depot perhaps 2,000 persons had assembled there. The crowd was very quiet and orderly, and the transfer of the president from the car was watched in silence and with apparent solicitude lest some accident might occur.

The president appeared greatly emaciated, and his face, though careworn and thin, seemed natural. At the depot and after the patient had been put upon the couch in the car, Gen. Swaim said the president had not been disturbed or disquieted in the least. At 5.40 precisely he was carried from the sick room to the express wagon, which had been backed up to the steps of the front portico by Drs. Bliss, Reynolds and Boynton, Gen. Swaim, Colonel Rockwell and Corbin and Messrs. C. O. Rockwell and Warren Young, who remained with the patient during his removal to the depot. The president was reclining in a peaceful position on the bed upon which for so many days he has been suffering and fighting for life.

His right hand was laid upon his breast, while his left hand was stretched at full length upon the coverlet. His high forehead was covered by a linen cloth, and his features, though emaciated, wore a patient and resigned expression. A small platform had been built from the portico to the wagon, and across this the bed was tenderly and carefully carried and placed in the wagon. There was no mishap whatever in the transit, and when the horses were hitched to the vehicle and started at 5.50 for the depot, a feeling of relief took possession of the bystanders, for in the opinion of many the most perilous portion of the journey had been accomplished. The conveyance was preceded to the depot by carriages containing the remainder of the party which was to accompany the president to Long Branch.

As the express wagon moved away from the executive mansion the president feebly but cheerily lifted his left hand and waved farewell to the inmates of the house who had assembled on the porch to wish him God-speed on his journey. The wagon was driven slowly through the grounds of the mansion and down Pennsylvania avenue to the Baltimore & Potomac depot, the horses at no time being driven faster than a walk. At the head of each horse stood a man ready to assume control of the animals in case of need. Fortunately, no such precaution was necessary, the ride to the depot being accomplished without any incident occurring worthy of note. The crowd which followed was orderly and anxious, not only for the safe transportation of the president but also to catch a glimpse of his face. This it was not difficult to do, as the curtains of the wagon were rolled up to breathe the pure morning air, which at that hour had not become sultry. The depot being reached, the horses were detached from the wagon, which was removed to the car selected for the removal of the president, and the same gentleman who had before performed the duty of transferring the patient from the white house to the wagon, carried him from the wagon to the railroad car. Though they met with some slight difficulty in doing this, owing to the fact that the floor of the car was rather high, the delicate task was performed successfully and without appearing to disturb the patient.

When inside the car he was transferred from the bed on which he had been carried thus far and placed upon a spring bed prepared for his reception. The remainder of the party having already taken their seats, the signal for departure was given, and amid silence the train started for the depot. The party who accompanied the president (consisting of Dr. Bliss, Woodward, Reynolds, Agnew, Corbin and Messrs. C. O. Rockwell and Warren Young, and servants.

Dr. Barnes, Woodward and Reynolds, Col. and Mrs. Rockwell and Messrs. Latta, Gen. Swaim, Col. Corbin, Francis Secretary Brown, Dr. Reynolds, Dr. Edson, C. O. Rockwell, and B. Young, and servants.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 6.—The Presidential train arrived in Kiberson at 10.10 p. m. Reached the cottage ten minutes later. There were about 2,000 people in the vicinity of the president's quarters. The regular troops on guard had no trouble in preserving perfect order. No sound marred the quiet of the neighborhood. Mrs. Garfield, upon her arrival, looked calm and not at all worried. Dr. Bliss and Corbin said the patient bore the journey exceedingly well. His pulse had not been above 110. Corbin says that upon reaching Long Branch it was suggested that it would soon be time to take a bath. The president said: "We need progress now more than a bath." At every town and station along the route masses of people gathered, generally with uncovered heads and exhibiting sympathy. Everything is perfectly quiet about the quarters. There is general gratification at the president's standing the trip so well. Shortly before noon about 2,500 people gathered about Franklin cottage. The guard kept the throng back, and although a rush was made when the train arrived, there was no difficulty in keeping people at a proper distance. No excitement prevailed, only a natural curiosity. Just before reaching the cottage the train stopped and the first car and baggage car were detached and pushed by hand around the sharp curve making a semi circle around the president's cottage. The car was then gently pushed to the cottage entrance. An awning around the portico protected the patient from the sun and observation. His removal to his room was accomplished without exciting him in the least. He seemed perfectly calm and well satisfied.

The surgeons are much gratified with the manner in which the removal was made, and are generally of the opinion that he bore the journey exceedingly well. The bulletins will continue three times daily. There will be no distribution of bulletins except at Secretary Brown's office, where copies will be served.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 6, 6.30 p. m.—Official bulletin.—Since the last bulletin was issued the president has been moved from Washington to Long Branch. He was more restless than usual last night, being evidently somewhat excited by the anticipation of the journey. This morning at 5.30 his pulse was 118, temperature 99.8, respiration 18. We left Washington with the president at 6.30 a. m. Owing to the admirable arrangements made by the Pennsylvania railroad company and to the ingeniously arranged bed designed by T. N. Ely, the fatigue incident to transportation was reduced to a minimum. Nevertheless as was anticipated, some signs of disturbance produced by the journey have been exhibited since arrival by the rise of temperature and the increased frequency of the pulse. Pulse 124, temperature 101.6, respiration 18. Signed by Bliss, Barnes, Woodward, Reynolds, Agnew and Hamilton.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 6.—The evening bulletin caused considerable excitement and some despondency. No apprehension is felt by the surgeons, as they expected the journey would induce a considerable rise in pulse and temperature.
10.30 p. m.—Blaine to Lowell and Morton, Minister, Paris: The president left Washington at 6.30 this morning, reaching Long Branch at 1.20. He seemed to bear the journey well, though the heat was very oppressive. After his arrival he was for several hours restless. He showed great fatigue and complained that his back had a bruised feeling. His pulse rose to 124, and his temperature to 101.6. At present (10.30) he is sleeping and the fever is abating. The surgeons regard the symptoms as a necessary result of the journey and expect a favorable change in this air within the next two days. The fever is partially attributed to the excitement of the prospect of coming. He earnestly desired to leave the white house, and his weary eyes welcomed the sight of the sea. The developments of the next 48 hours are awaited with solicitude.
Boynton said to night that the pulse was about the same as at the evening dressing. If the president should die before to-morrow I should still think his removal was the proper thing. He was dying, inch by inch, in Washington. I hope here he will gain sufficient strength to recover. I look for a favorable change in the morning. We shall feel glad as if there is not. The wound is, has been responsive power to react from the fatigue.

Dr. Hamilton said about 10 to night that he thought the pulse was not quite so rapid as earlier in the evening. He had no doubt the patient would continue in his present condition a day or two before he commenced to rally. There is an apparent uneasiness about the president's condition to night among the cabinet officers and others acquainted with the facts. This is telegraphed as indicating anxious results. A gentleman intimating that Agnew had given him little or no encouragement, but this is considered as exaggerated or misinterpreted. The patient is certainly decidedly low, but it is almost confidently expected that the morning dressing will show an improvement.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 6.—No change has been reported in the president's condition since the last dispatch. It has been ascertained that at 10.30 he had been sleeping quietly for an hour and a quarter. There is a better feeling now than early in the night. All the members of the cabinet arrived to-night, and will remain for the present. Lincoln

LIFE AT "CAMP YATES."
Grand Review of the Second Brigade by Gov. Culbertson on Tuesday.
Decatur has two fine looking military companies at "Camp Yates," near Bloomingdale, and both are in charge of Captains Foster and Garis. They belong to the Second Brigade, Illinois National Guard, and from all reports, must be having a grand good time on the tented field. The encampment will break up to-morrow, and most of Decatur militiamen will arrive home in time to get a good rest before taking in "All the Rage" Friday evening and Barnum's "Owa and Only" on Saturday.
GRAND REVIEW.
The grand review of the Second Brigade took place on Tuesday evening, when the firing of cannon salutes announced the arrival of Governor Culbertson from Springfield. The Bloomington Patriot of to-day says:
The brigade formed on the south side of the camp in front of the headquarters in single rank. Gov. Culbertson and staff, Gen. Hancock and staff followed the brigade in line, galloping over its front and passing back in the rear of the column. They then took their stand on the right flank of the line and brigade headquarters, and the brigade formed in company fronts single rank, passed before the governor. Each regiment as it passed in front of the governor, was saluted by a "carry arms" position. The brigade was then massed by regiments and marched to the east side of the camp.
A WELL DRILLED BRIGADE.
The proficiency of the troops as brought out in the evolutions of the grand review was favorably spoken of by civilians and militiamen alike. It is two years since this brigade met together at Springfield, and in that time its two regiments have met together for drill. To particularize the movements of any company or regiment among many would be impossible, for all acquired themselves with great credit and showed a high degree of proficiency in drill. A good word must be said for the drill of the bands, of which there are about a dozen, and they are excellent ones. Their music was a charm to the ears of the spectators. The spectators were very much interested in observing the leading of orders. The commanding general called out the commands. This is repeated by the colonels to the captains, who give the order to their troops. In this way the entire commandment the order at once, as if moved by one impulse. The citizen soldiers were addressed by the governor.
To-day and to-morrow the veteran soldiers and sailors will hold the fort at "Camp McCullough." Gen. Grant and his son Fred, who left New York for Chicago last Friday, are announced to arrive in Bloomington to-day, and other distinguished soldiers will participate in the parade.
Held in Bloomington.
John McCormick and his pal, Carroll or Farrell, who successfully played the change confidence game at Henry Smith's drug store in this city about a week ago, and got away with $5 in cash, are both now behind the bars in the Macon county jail. Carroll shipped for parts unknown after McCormick got locked up in default of $5000 bail. The two strangers stopped at Drake's Hotel before they got into trouble. Carroll was spotted on the streets of Bloomington yesterday by a young clerk at the Drake Hotel. He notified Sheriff Foster in command of Co. B. at "Camp Yates," who got Officer Butler to arrest Carroll. The prisoner was head-cuffed and brought to Decatur last evening in charge of Lieut. Warner and other members of the Guards. At the trial no doubt Henry Smith and John King will be able to identify Carroll, and both will go up the road for a term of years.
Gent Party Cases.
This evening Mrs. C. T. Moreford, whose husband is in charge of the Race brothers' store at Monticello, will give a large and brilliant party at her home. Mr. A. O. Brewer, the North Main street baker of Decatur, received an order to prepare three large cakes for the occasion, and they were sent to Monticello this forenoon by express. Each cake is very large, and all are perfect gems, reflecting great credit upon Mr. Brewer and his experienced St. Louis artist, whose skill in the decorative art cannot be excelled. The order was for a fruit, pound, and silver or lady's cake, and those who saw them before they were sent from the bakery say they were the largest and finest cakes ever baked in Decatur.

A Pleasant Family Reading.
An interesting Occasion Fully Described by a Whitman Correspondent.
EDITHA REYNOLDS. A most delightful family reunion was held to-day at the residence of Mr. A. J. Thrift, 1 1/2 miles southeast of this place. The younger members of the family had gathered at the place entirely unknown to Mr. and Mrs. Thrift, both of whom were sent off to sleep in the morning. After they were gone the relatives, who had met at Mr. J. P. Thrift's, moved in a delegation to the home place. Arriving there they immediately prepared and set two long tables, which were literally loaded down with the good things of life. After this was done the time was pleasantly spent in conversation and in inspecting the arrangements for the surprise of the old folks on their return. In the period against the wall was a beautiful wreath of evergreens encircling the figure 1881-1882, embracing a period of thirty years to-day, which Mr. Thrift and his present wife have lived together. When they were seen coming from church all the relatives gathered in the parlor, which they were ushered into on their arrival into the midst of thirty-eight of their children and grand children. Their surprise was complete, and more than complete. When Mrs. Minnie Bower, in a few well chosen and feeling remarks, presented her father on behalf of the relatives, a splendid roasting chair and a gold-headed ebony cane, each costing $14, Mr. Thrift replied, with tears running down his cheeks, accepting the useful and beautiful presents from his children. After the presentation the house went into a committee of the whole, and proceeded to inspect and test the contents of the commissary department, where the inner man was beautifully supplied and enough left to feed another Thrift generation.
The family relatives present were: Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Thrift, Alonzo Thrift, Chas. Thrift, Mary Thrift, Grace Thrift, Douglas Thrift, Mabel Thrift, G. E. Short, Isabelle Short, Henrietta Short, Goldy Short, L. C. Martin, Mrs. Bessie Martin, Emma Martin, Maud Martin, Clark Martin, Stella Martin, Marie Martin, Claude Martin, Susan Martin, W. A. Thrift, Mrs. Mary Thrift, Edith Thrift, John Thrift, Cora Thrift, Frank Thrift, Emma Thrift, G. W. Bower, Mrs. Minnie Bower, Alice Bower, Zora Bower, Grace Bower, Glad Bower, J. P. Thrift, Mrs. Minnie Thrift, Emma Thrift, Harry Thrift, Edith Thrift, Charles Thrift, Frank Thrift, all Mr. and Mrs. Thrift and child, of Decatur, never met before in person, which makes it all. The evening was pleasantly passed in conversation, interspersed with music.
Mr. Thrift will be 40 years old in October, and has been a resident of Illinois for about 20 years. He has struggled with poverty and adversity in his earlier days, and now has a beautiful home, embracing a half section of well-titled land, with two adjoining farms, as the reward of his industry and perseverance. He has lived to see his state grow up from a few scattered settlements to be the home of millions and a giant arm of the great Republic. J. R.
Barnum, Sept. 4, 1881.

THE FOLLOWING ARE EXTRACTS FROM A LETTER RECENTLY RECEIVED AT NORTH-FIELD BY FRIENDS ATTENDING THE CON-VENTION FROM THE PRESIDENT'S PERS-ON. THE REV. F. D. POWERS, of Washington. It was in reply to an inquiry made by them as to Mr.
Garfield's present spiritual condition: "His life is before the world, a living epistle to be known and read of all men. To you I may say he has the ever present comforter, the indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit during all these weary days and nights of suffering. On last Sunday morning as he opened his eyes to his holy light, he said, 'This is the Lord's day. I have a very great reverence for it.' He takes great comfort in prayer. Knowing that my little church is continually in prayer for him, he said, 'Dear little church on Vermont avenue.
They have been carrying me as a great burden so long. But when I get up they shall have no cause to regret it.' Of his peril of death he has been mindful, and over and over again has said, 'I must prepare for either life or death.' This has been the principle of his life during all his experience as he expressed it to me, 'When I meet the duties of each day as best I can I cheerfully await whatever result may come.' I could say many things, but my heart and hands are both too full.
He is on the border land. We are beholding the mercy seat, and we expect God's answer with anxiety, but not, I trust, without great faith and submission. In conclusion I may say, in the words of President Garfield to me, in a season of like distress—the death of his little son,
'In the hope of the Gospel, which is so precious in this affliction,' I am affectionately your brother in Christ."
